THE WIDOW'S WHIM.

'You know,' said the widow, in a voice smothered with sobs, 'the misfortune'— here she applied a delicate cambric handkerchief to her eyes—'the loss—' She could get no further.

Her visitor bowed, with an air of respectful condolence.

'I wish,' continued the widow, 'I wish to erect a monument to the memory of my poor husband. I have chosen you to execute the order.' She had become somewhat calmer.

The sculptor bowed again.

'I wish this monument to be superb—worthy of the dear companion whom I have lost; proportioned to my—'

'S e was getting hysterical. Her visitor handed her a bottle of salts that stood convenient on the little work table.

The widow resumed, 'Spare no expense.
I would willingly consecrate my whole fortune to his memory.'

A pause, which the sculptor hesitated to break.

'I should like,' said the widow, again coming to the point, 'a temple with marble columns, and in the middle, upon a pedestal, his statue.' Here she swallowed a sob.

'I shall do my best to fulfill your wishes, ma'am,' said the man of art. 'I had not, however, the honor of personally knowing the late Mr. Bellair, and his likeness is indispensable to the completion of the design.
Doubtless you have a portrait of him.'

The widow raised her rounded arm and pointed to a insignificant portrait, by one of our first artists.

'An admirable painting,' said the visitor. 'I need not ask you if the resemblance be striking.'

'It is himself. Life is all that is needed. Ah, if I could have given mine for his!' The handkerchief was again in requisition.

'I will send for the portrait, ma'am, and I guarantee that the likeness shall be exact.'

'Send for the portrait!' cried the widow, with a stifled shriek; 'take from me my only consolation, my only happiness? Never!'

'But, ma'am, it will only be for a little while.'

'A little while! An age! How could I live without this dear image?' It spoke neither day nor night; I contemplate it without ceasing through my tears. It will never be removed out of this room, where I shall pass the remainder of a miserable existence.'

The widow had worked herself up to such a pitch of feeling that the sculptor rose to ring the bell for assistance. But she had a white hand on his coat-sleeve, and he sat down again.

'Then you will allow me, ma'am, to come here to take a copy of it? Be not alarmed; I shall not long invade your solitude. A single sitting will suffice.'

The widow agreed to this arrangement, and requested the sculptor to commence the next day. But he had a previous order to execute. She would have leveled the difficulty with gold, but he stood firm.

'My word is pledged,' he said, 'do not, however, be troubled about the delay. I will work so diligently that the monument shall be finished within the time that another artist would have requested for consideration.'

'You have been a witness of my sorrow,' were the widow's parting words; 'you may imagine my impatience to see the work completed. Make your best haste; spare no expense, and let me have a masterpiece.'

He had afterwards several letters repeating these injunctions.

At the end of three months the sculptor returned. He found the widow still in the deepest mourning, but her cheek was less pale, and there was a slight tinge of coquetry in the arrangement of her words.

'Now, ma'am,' said the visitor, 'I am at your disposal.'

'Ah! well, I am glad to hear it,' replied the widow, with a gracious smile.

'I have sketched the statue and shall only need one sitting to transfer the recomblance. Permit me to enter your boudoir.'

'And wherefore?' inquired the widow, with an air of surprise.

'To see the portrait.'

'Oh! will you walk into the drawing-room? It is there you will find it now.'

'Indeed!'

'Yes; there is much better light than in the boudoir, where you first saw it.'

'Would you like to look at a sketch of the monument, ma'am?'

'Willingly. How grand. What exquisite ornaments. Why, it's a palace, this temple!' exclaimed the widow.

'You told me, ma'am, that it could not be too magnificent. I have spared no expense; and here is an estimate of what the monument will cost you.'

'Dear me! cried the widow, after having glanced at the total. 'It is enormous!'

'You begged me to spare nothing—'

'Certainly! I wished to do the thing handsomely. Still we ought to be rational.'

'Well, this is only the first sketch; there is yet time to alter your intentions.'

'Very good. Suppose, then, we suppress the temple, the columns—all the architecture, in short—and content ourselves with the statue? I was too ambitious, it will be quite sufficient.'

'You shall be obeyed.'

'It is decided, then. Nothing but the statue.'

A short time after this second visit the sculptor fell dangerously ill. He was obliged to suspend his labors; and, having followed the recommendation of his physician, and made a tour on the Continent, he presented himself anew before the widow, who was now in the tenth month of her reconvalescence. This time there were some roses among the cypresses. The artist brought with him a little plaster model of his statue, which promised to be a masterpiece.

'What do you think of the resemblance?' he said to the widow.

She gazed upon it for a moment and then said: 'Is it not a little flattered? My poor husband was tolerably good-looking, but you make him actually handsome.'

'Indeed! Well, I will rectify my work by the portrait.'

'It is scarcely worth your while,' observed the widow. 'A little more or a little less resemblance, what does it signify?'

'Pardon me, ma'am, but I plume myself upon exactness.'

'If you really wish to take the trouble,' said the widow, 'the portrait is in the drawing-room, is it not?'

'I will go there now,' replied the widow, ringing the bell. 'Robert,' continued she, addressing the servant who answered her summons, 'bring the portrait of your late master.'

'The one that was taken up into the gar-ret last week, ma'am?'

'Yes, the same.'

Just then the door opened, and an elgant young gentleman presented himself with a jaunty air, kissed the lady's hand, and enquired after her health with the most gallant solicitude.

'What is this little plaster man?' asked he, pointing to the statue, which the artist had placed upon the chimney-piece.

'It is the model of the statue for the tomb of my late husband.'

'You intend to erect a statue to his memory? Upon my word, that is very magnificent.'

'You think so?'

'Great men are sculptured at full length in marble; but it appears to me—'

'My frankness—that the late Mr. Bellair was a very ordinary man. In fact, his last would suffice.'

'As you please, ma'am,' said the sculptor, turning to the lady.

'Then we will decide upon the bust,' said she, bowing him out.

Two months later the bust arrived, just as a gay procession descended the hall steps and got into the carriage that waited their approach. The widow was on her way to the altar, with the elegant dandy who had caused the suppression of her husband's statue, there to take upon herself a second vow of conjugal fidelity.

Scandal adds that the bust would have willingly have been returned; that the newly married couple considered the sculptor's demand enormous; and that it was only with considerable difficulty, and with a threat of further proceedings, that he was at length reimbursed for the time and trouble spent upon the widow's whim.

A SELF-TAUGHT BOY.

The Duke of Argyll, who lived in Queen Anne's reign, was one day walking in his garden when he saw a Latin book lying on the grass. Thinking it had been brought from his library he gave directions for it to be taken back, when a lad called Edmund Stone, then in his eighteenth year, a son of the gardener, claimed it as his own.

The Duke was surprised, and on questioning him was still further astonished at his answers.

'But how,' said the Duke, 'came you by the knowledge of all these things?'

Stone replied, 'A servant taught me ten years since to read; and on being further pressed by the Duke he thus continued:

'I first learned to read; the masons were then at work upon your house. I approached them one day, and observed that the architect used a rule and compasses, and then he made calculations. I inquired what might be the use and meaning of these things, and I was informed that there was a science called arithmetic. I purchased a book of arithmetic, and I learned it. I was told that there was another science called geometry; I bought the necessary books, and I learned geometry. By reading I found that there were good books on these two sciences in Latin; I bought a dictionary and I learned Latin.
I understood that also there were good books of the same kind in French; I bought a dictionary and learned French. And this, my lord, is what I have done; it seems to me that we may learn everything when we know that twenty-six letters of the alphabet.'

Edmund Stone afterward published some scientific works, and was chosen a fellow of the Royal Society.

All my readers know the twenty-six letters of the alphabet, but how few have thought the knowledge of them so valuable as to enable them to learn everything.

MIT-A-TIGHT SQUEEZE.

A Story for Congressmen Who Give Away Stolen Money.

From the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Most or all of our readers are aware that just before the adjournment of the last Congress, a bill was passed increasing the pay of the members, and also with a sort of retrospective character which gave to each member a handsome sum by way of back pay.

The papers generally have criticized this proceeding very severely. Some of the members refused at first to receive it, and others who did receive it have since disseminated it to benevolent purposes. Very little of such distribution, however, was made until after much had been said by the papers against the action of Congress in making the appropriation. These benefactions, under the circumstances, remind us of a certain action on the part of one Snyder, who lived a little east of a place called Mount Airy, then in Wytke county, Virginia. Snyder was a quiet, good sort of a man, but subject to fits of derangement or inanity, during which he usually imagined himself to be the ruler of the universe, and would often proceed to hold the day of judgment and pass sentence upon his neighbors according to his own likes and dislikes. He was the owner of a little country mill for grinding corn; two of his neighbors, John and Jake Fulwider, had in partnership a mill also. Between these and Snyder there never was too much good feeling, thus verifying the old adage, 'Two of a trade can never agree.' One day, when Snyder was a little more crazy than usual, and particularly mad at the Fulwidors, he perched himself upon some elevation and proceeded, as he said, to hold the day of judgment.

He first tried the Fulwidors, and convicted them of taking too much toll by their own confessions, and confined them to the left hand 'mit de gate.'

'Now,' said he, 'I will try Jake Snyder, what has he been about in this lower world? Ah, I do not know.'

'Vell, Jake, did you not have a mill?'

'Yes, I had a mill,' Vell Jake Snyder, did you not take too much toll?'

'Yes, ven de water was low and de mill-stones dull, I did take a little too much toll, but den I always did give it too de poor.'

Then, after considering awhile, he added, 'Jake Snyder, you may go to the right hand mit de gate, but it is mit-a-tight squeeze!'

The reader may make his own application. If these men can get clear of the odium attached to the manner in which the money was received, by giving that money to the poor, it will be 'mit-a-tight squeeze.'

THE RATTLE-SNAKE'S RATTLE.

In the American Naturalist, Professor Samuel Aughey gives the results of his observations upon the use made of their rattles by rattlesnakes. It is the vulgar opinion that the reptile sounds his rattle for the purpose of enticing birds, and some naturalists even are disposed to find here a mimicry of the sound made by the so-called locusts, or cicadas. Prof. Aughey does not undertake to explain all the purposes served by the rattle, but he fully agrees with Mas. W. E. Putnam in rejecting this mimic theory. Does the rattle, then, serve any useful purpose? In reply to this question, the author tells us what he has himself observed. In July, 1868, he was in Wayne county, Nebraska, and as he was one day investigating the natural history of that district, he heard the familiar rattle of the snake. The sound was repeated at intervals, and proceeded from a rattle-snake that was calling his mate, which soon came in answer to the summons. Professor Aughey had a similar experience the following year, and from these facts he is disposed to think that the purpose served by the rattle is to call the sexes together. Another purpose may be to paralyze its victim with fright, and to inspire its natural enemies with terror. As an illustration of the use of the rattle for the latter purpose, the author says that, as he followed through the woods of Dakota county, Nebraska, a Baltimore oriole, he heard the rattle and at once saw the bird as if paralyzed with fear, and ready to fall a prey to the serpent. The author shot the rattle-snake. He adds that he once witnessed an attack of seven hogs on a rattlesnake. Soon after the battle opened the snake rattled, and three hogs came to his aid. But the hogs were victorious in a few minutes.

A RICH GOLD MINE.—The Builder says the ocean holds $1,600,000,000,000, 000 in gold in solution. This surely beats all the gold mines of Australia, California, and of all the world put together. How to get this gold out in an economical way, so as to make it pay, is the problem which the chemists and metallurgists of coming ages are to solve.

A finished coquette at a ball asked a gentleman near her, while she adjusted her tucker, whether he could flirt a fan which she held in her hand. 'No, madam,' he replied, 'but I can fan a flirt.'

'Was it your oldest daughter, madam, that was bitten by a monkey?'

'No, sir, it was my youngest. My oldest daughter had worse misfortune; she married a monkey.'

HER SPRING HAT—HOW THE AV- BRAGE WOMAN CONSTRUCTS HER HEAD-GEAR.

Max Adeler, in the Saturday Evening Post.

A woman who is considering the matter of her spring hat is an interesting subject for contemplation. First she buys a straw frame that looks as if it had been struck by a hurricane and then sat down on by an entire coroner's jury. After that, when she rides in a street-car, she drinks in the details of every spring hat that enters, and learns them all by heart, and does mental sums over the cost of the ribbons, and makes up her mind to have flowers in her hat like those worn by the woman in the corner, and lace like that gaudylooking creature in the middle. And when she walks down the street and studies all the hats that come along, and when a woman passes her with one on, she twists her neck around to see how it looks behind, and is disgusted to see that the woman is also disconcerting her neck, to see how she trims her hat. When she arrives in front of a millinery store she lingers until she has analyzed all the spring hats in the window, and she determines to trim hers nine teen different ways, and decides not to have flowers like the woman who sat in the corner. Then she shoots into the store and asks to 'see hats,' with the air of a person who has a whole female seminary to rig out with eighty-dollar head-gear. She examines every hat in the establishment, overhauls ten bushels of flowers, gets about twenty dollars worth of work out of the saleswoman, and then says she will 'look further.' Then she goes home with her mind fixed on thirty-eight or nine different styles in which she wants to trim her hat. After awhile she begins to think she ought to have a feather in it, and she passes two or three sleepless nights trying to decide whether to put one on or not.

Then she lies down and she lies down two nights more endeavoring to determine whether it shall be red or blue.
She buys the trimming and sews it on in seventy successive positions, her mind filled with the deepest anxiety as to whether the feather should go on the right side, the left side, or on top. She puts it on the right side, but just then Mrs. Brown passes the front window with a feather on the left side of hers, and so she changes it.
The next morning Mrs. Ferguson calls, and then another change is made. At church the next day Mrs. Smith has feathers on both sides, and Mrs. Johnson has one on top. Then more sleepless nights and more painful uncertainty. At last, in utter despair she takes the hat to a milliner and pays ten dollars to have it trimmed. When it comes home she pronounces it 'hateful,' and picks it all to pieces, and broods over, and worries and frets, and loses her appetite, and feels life to be a burden for a week or two longer, until suddenly she hits just the right thing, and becomes once more serene and happy, and puts the hat on and goes out make millions of other women miserable because their hats are not trimmed exactly like hers. As a wife woman is a blessing; as a mother she is an inestimable boon; as an organizer of spring hats she is simply an object of compassion.

THE POSTAL CARDS.

The postal cards cost the government $1.36 per thousand.

Writers of indecent matter on postal cards are subject to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $5,000 for each offense.

Since the Empress of Russia has been in Italy, it is discovered that the Czar and herself are so confidential in their correspondence, as to never trust the mails.

They always employ special couriers, and never patronize postal cards.

A young man in Lancaster sent off his first postal card last week. After writing a message on the card, he enclosed it in an envelope, put on a three cent stamp and dropped it in the post office, remarking that it was a very handy arrangement, and should have been introduced years ago.

The origin of postal cards dates from the Franco-Prussian war. The difficulty of soldiers in securing pens and paper upon which to write home, induced the German authorities to issue bits of paste board to the soldiers for this purpose and they were largely availed of. The message being written in pencil. Their use was continued thereafter in time of peace, and has since been adopted in England and the United States.

The agent sent to Springfield by the Postmaster General, reports that no postal cards have been printed by the American Envelope Company during the past week.

They have, as yet, furnished only eight millions of the twenty-five millions ordered. The department settled on the sample card, the character of the paper and inscription included, before the making of the contract, and, therefore, its terms were plainly understood. Mr. Creswell is determined, if possible, to apply a remedy to the present inferior quality of paper, and, to that end, will appoint some suitable person to inspect the paper before it shall be used so that the work may be equal to official requirements.

A New York paper has been figuring on the postal card sum, and explains its work as follows: According to Mr. Creswell, the postal cards cost the government $1.36 per thousand. The orders up to date have reached the enormous amount of 25,000,- 000, of which the cost to the people will be $250,000 and to the government $34,- 000. Allowing $16,000 for the additional expense of delivery—which, we presume, is a liberal allowance—and the net additional to the revenue is $2,000,000.

This is within $10,000 of enough to pay the salaries of the President, his seven Cabinet officers, and the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, at the advanced rates; it is twice the amount of the cost of the Tribunal of Arbitration at Geneva; it is nearly as much as the cost of the national currency for one year; and it is twenty-five per cent. more than the cost of the signal service for one year.

THE THERMOMETER.

Mr. James Parton, in an interesting article in the New York Ledger, in which he refers to the various improvements made by Gabriel Fahrenheit and others, concludes as follows:

The use of the thermometer has added greatly to our knowledge, and is doubtless destined to play a still more important part in the future. The following fact may be interesting. The lowest degree of artificial cold that has yet been produced is one hundred and eighty-seven below zero.

The hardest thing to freeze is carbonic acid, which requires a temperature of one hundred and forty-eight below zero. At forty below zero mercury freezes; and this is also the average winter at Nova Zembla.

Hillsborough Recorder.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1873.

OUR EXCHANGES.

The new Postal law goes into operation on the 1st of July, thereby threatening a material alteration in the features of our exchanges. We have had no intimation from most of the papers of their intentions. Some, like the Southern Home express a determination to curtail their lists, and content themselves with a few select friends. For our own part, we cannot make up our minds to dispense with any. They have all become endeared to us by association and we cannot spare their familiar faces. Like our friend Harrell, of the Henderson Tribune, we feel that we must have them all around us. We shall therefore drop only those to whom we ourselves may prove unwelcome through that process.

It is a tax, harsh though it be in principle, that we are willing to submit to, not only for our own gratification, but the good of our readers. In justice to them, we cannot throw away the varied sources of information, which a full exchange lists give us. We desire to make our paper acceptable to all, and we are willing to increase the additional expense which the Postal law inflicts, believing in the end it will fully compensate us in pure, as it already does in the satisfaction we derive from the practice.

SUPPORT OF NORTHERN PAPERS.

There is a class of Northern papers which we admire and respect, leaders in intelligence and taste, full of information, always on the side of morality and virtue, and indispensable to the whole country as standard guides upon all subjects necessary to a correct knowledge of affairs. There is another class we could better be without, pirates in literature, corrupt in morality, hostile to religion, indifferent to right information, intent only upon emotional excitement, and in general, unwelcome to the South is flooded, and its discards, and to its injury that it is so. The chief reason of the extensive circulation of these papers is because they are cheap. They are furnished at a less cost than our own papers can afford. Apart from the well recognized rule that what is done on a very large scale can be done more cheaply than on a smaller one, it is well known, that in large cities, by the interchange of matter, or by the combination of what is used in several different offices, a paper may be published without a particle of original matter being set up. No wonder these papers can be issued at very low rates.

By this means our own papers are displaced, and the training of the minds of our people, especially the youth, brought under northern influence, and that of the worst kind. For it is not to be denied, that the reading matter of this class of papers is objectionable. Fathers, solicited to subscribe, rarely inquire farther than the price, and the amount of reading matter, and ignorant of the quality thrown into the hands of their daughters material that they should be most carefully guarded against. Even when not absolutely immoral, or corrupting in their tendencies, there is an enervating influence in such literature, which is as hostile to a healthful development of the mental faculties as the most objectionable class of sensational novels. But the evil does not end here, for interpersed through all these papers, there are bits of political teachings, doctrines at war with our ideas, and with our frame of society. The young mind is insensibly trained through its susceptibility to impressions, to an indifference, if not a hostility to our own section. Patriotism is weakened, and the southern mind becomes subject to a vassalage to northern opinions, northern habits, northern modes of thought. How earnestly this is to be deprecated only requires the most careless glance into the state of northern society and morality, where irreligion, infidelity, contempt for the most sacred or time honored institutions, dishonesty, love of gain, contempt for all moral restraints, the most shameless defiance of public opinion, everything in fact that strikes at the foundation of well-ordered society, prevail as the rule of action.

The exclusion of our State and county papers, has another effect, in begetting an indifference to our own internal affairs, an ignorance of what ought most intimately concern every man in the community, an apathy in our political struggles, and an indifference to the success of parties, all tending to the perpetuation of the rule of ignorance and corruption, and preparing the people for the final overthrow of free institutions.

Until the people learn to look at home for the means of information, for which the press of their own State can very well give them, until they make their chief interest in State and home affairs, they will never raise that independent tone which was the boast of North Carolina.

CHOLERA IN THE WEST.

There is no longer any doubt that the Cholera prevails as an epidemic in the Mississippi valley notwithstanding the effort of the press to divert the fears of the public by giving a less formidable name to the disease. In Memphis the fatality is considerable, amounting to 15, and as high as 25 a day. In Nashville, it is more prevalent than many as 40 having died in one day, and the panic has increased. It has appeared in Greenville, Tenn. not far from the western boundary of this State, and several prominent citizens have died. Some fatal cases have appeared in Cincinnati, and there is hardly a doubt that the whole western country will soon feel the scourge.

We do not think the disease will visit North Carolina as an epidemic. It has never yet done so. The epidemic of 1832, the first year of its appearance on this continent, and its most fatal visitation, entirely overlooked this State. The same was the case in the year 1848-49, and 1854. There is something in the atmosphere and the water, which is hostile to the disease, and which prevents its getting a foot hold. There may be something, too, in the theory that the disease follows the sweep of the equatorial current of moist South-west and South-east winds. This might account for its rapid spread through the Mississippi valley, where such are the prevailing winds. Yet there can be no question, that there are other atmospheric agencies at work in that valley, which coupled with the character of the water used, and the use of fruits and vegetables, which invite the disease and aid in its progress.

We have said that we do not believe the disease will ever appear as an epidemic among us. Yet that belief would not justify our people in disregarding sanitary rules and precautions. It is always observable in Cholera years, that there is every where a marked tendency to enteric diseases. It is therefore as necessary for us to observe prudence in diet and living, as if we were in infected districts, and to use the safeguards of temperate living, and scrupulous cleanliness in buildings, lots, streets, and other places which might become the abode of disease, as if we were in a pestilence.

Let the town authorities every where have every place rigidly policed, establishments thoroughly cleansed, use whitewash freely, and apply disinfectants in all places emitting offensive odors, and with us there will be no cause of apprehension, while a neglect of these may be the cause of much aggravating sickness.

BEN BUTLER FOR GOVERNOR.

Alas how are the mighty fallen! The land of Hancock, of Ames, of Adams, of Webster, of Choate, of that array of intellect and worth which once elevated Massachusetts to such a commanding height in the eyes of the world, is trodden in the dust, bestridden by rogues, and mental dwarfs, driven to shame and ruin by such men as Ben Butler, and Oak Ames. But Massachusetts is reaping retributive justice. She is gathering what she has sown. She scorned the counsel of Daniel Webster. She repudiated Choate. She discarded Adams, and she took up Ben Butler. Now, Butler, once firmly in his seat, is not going to come down. He can't be kicked down. He won't be pulled down. Like the old man of the Sea, he has his legs firmly clasped around the neck of his unwilling bearer, and is bent upon taking her wherever he wills. It is her own doing, and we have no sympathies to waste on Massachusetts. We may mock at her calamities, and laugh when her fear cometh.

THE HENDERSON TRIBUNE.

Among numbers whom we met at the Goldsboro Convention who promised us the pleasure of an exchange, was our newly found friend Harrell of the Tribune. We have looked in vain for that paper until this morning, when it at last made its appearance. We knew friend Harrell had taken very full notes of his trip, and we excused him, thinking he was writing them up. But the Tribune shows no results of such work. No allusion to the 'sea beaten shore' or 'the baptism of the boy at the brook' or any of the poetical or funny incidents of the trip. But we welcome him nevertheless, and hope he will make his regular appearance hereafter.

Thank you, friend Harrell, for your very flattering discrimination, in our favor, expressed in your last issue.

The Milton Chronicle says: We rejoice to hear that the waste places of old Hillsboro are to be built up. It is high time that she was waking up. And if ever she expects to be anything, she must look to printer's ink. If each Merchant in the town will give the Recorder a column advertisement for a year and advertise liberally by hand-bills, it will not only show 'business' but produce a trade profitable to merchant and publisher and be the making of the old town. But no town can flourish without live men.

COMMENCEMENTS.

This is the season when not only the educational interest of the people is awakened but the hopes and anticipations of the future and the beaux of the state are roused to the highest pitch. It is the period of the Annual Commencements when the various colleges send forth their new batch of graduates cheered in their entry upon the arena of practical life by the smile of beauty, and the commendations of the learned, and the virtuous. Trinity, Wake Davidson each in their turn enjoy their festivals, and launch upon the ocean of life, a new set of aspirants for its honors, or laborers in its duties. Chapel Hill alas is silent. She is hidden and buried under the mantle of degradation thrown over her by faithless and vindictive rulers. Shall she have no awakening. Will not the true sons of the State wipe off her disgrace? We shall see.

ITEMS FROM THE CENSUS REPORT OF 1870.

The aggregate population of North Carolina was 1,071,361 of which 678,470 were white, 391,650 were colored and 1241 Indians, 3,027 were foreign born; the natives of the U. S. There were 825 blind and 619 deaf and dumb, and 772 insane besides 976 idiots. There were 1706 paupers, of which 593 were colored. The number of persons in prison June 1st 1870 was 462; 132 whites, and 330 negroes.

JESSE RUFFIN: The above named Freedman having taken the advantage of me in a matter of labor, I feel it duty bound to warn all good people against him. I have sufficient confidence in his disposition and ability to cheat, wrong and defraud, to know that if he would wrong a poor laboring man like myself he would not hesitate to wrong those whom he thinks better to bear it. The above is a wrong for which I paid dearly and I hope this notice of his honor will enable others to steer clear of him.

THIS is strictly a HOME LIFE COMPANY.

Let Officers and Directors be citizens of the State, of high character for business capacity, enterprise and probity. It offers every that Northern Companies do with the great additional consideration that the capital is kept within the State, and therefore helps to build up and foster Home Institutions.

SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT

Another important fact to be considered is, that the Wilmington Life has three far obtained a very much larger interest for the money invested at home, than any of the New York Companies receive for their investments, according to their own statements before the Commissioner of that State.

These unquestionable facts should commend this Company, above all others, to our people. Let it be borne in mind that millions of dollars received for Life premiums have been sent North since the war, which at once drains the South and enriches the Northern capitalists of the North. If there was no other consideration, safety, fairness and cheapness being equal, why North Carolinians should insure at home, this was more than evident.

THE WILMINGTON LIFE.

has excellent special features.

It places no restriction on Residence or Travel. It makes no extra charge for Female risks, and its Policies are immediately payable after Five Years.

Its business is managed reasonably. Its risks are taken with equal caution. Its investments are made judiciously. Its motto is:

What Harvest.

The harvest is progressing in this and the adjoining counties, with remarkable fine weather for the purpose. The account of the condition of the crops are very conflicting, in some portions of the county, the yield promising a fair average, while in others it is much below. In the red land the crops have fared more hardly from the severity of the winter. In the gray lands the injury was less. On the whole, it may be said that the wheat crop of Orange is not a full one, nor is the grain as good as it was last year.

Improvements in the Orange House.

Workmen are now engaged in putting up a double piazza along the whole front of the Orange House, adding much to its appearance, and the comfort of the guest. This excellent house is now ready for the reception of summer sojourners. It has a number of good rooms suitable for families and its table maintains a uniform excellence. Its terms are moderate, and it should as we expect it will attract a large share of patronage.

A rare sight.

We witnessed a few mornings since the rare spectacle of the migration of a small species of caterpillar; rare, not from the migration but for the form in which it was made. The insects, each about half an inch in length, hairless, of a silvery gray color, were closely compacted one upon the other, forming a mass or rope, the diameter of which in its largest part was about the thickness of one's finger. The rope was about two feet in length, and presented precisely the appearance of a snake, the one end representing the head, while from the middle it tapered off to a fine extremity, forming the tail. The mass had a forward serpentine movement, each individual worm in motion, and each one working gradually forward, constantly reversing the position of all, the head gradually becoming the tail and vice versa, consequently there was no defined leadership. The resemblance to a slow moving snake, in size, color, position and motion, was perfect. We have before seen the same sight, but it is very rare.

Mr. Wilbon's Appeal.

Elsewhere will be found an appeal to the citizens of Hillsboro by the newly appointed Mayor, asking cooperation to enable him effectually to discharge the duties of his office.

Upon the subject of public order, little need be said. The public peace of our town is rarely disturbed, and the proprietors of life are very generally strictly preserved.

Mr. Wilbon's suggestions upon the subject of nuisances are well timed, and meritorious. In a sanitary point of view they ought to impress every one at this season of the year, when pestilence is abroad in the land, and is ready to accept every invitation to an aiding place. Hillsboro is proverbially healthy, but man may successfully fight against nature, and subvert its most beneficent intentions, in courting disease by the snare of filth and neglect. The fierce heats of a summer sun acting upon reeking masses of corruption whether animal or vegetable, upon damp and dirty yards and back lots, upon filthy streets and obstructed gutters, can soon pollute the purest air, and turn the healthiest region into a pest house. That there is a disregard of these things here is apparent, and there is a want of neatness, and absence of paint, and white wash, a neglect of fences and inclosures, a tolerance of tumble down and dilapidated structures, which is painfully striking. Many of us plead inability, from want of means. But poverty and neatness are not incompatible. Pride should suggest the effort to disguise the rents and latrines by the ingenious assumption of a better condition, not to flaunt the rags of indigence in the public eye as banners of a careless independence.

Dogs vs. Sheep.

A neighbor of ours informs us that a night or two ago, his flock of sheep was attacked by dogs, and five killed, or wounded so as make killing a deed of mercy, and that moreover, the owner of the dogs, well known for their destructive habits, protected them, and would not allow him the satisfaction of killing the brutes, or having it done. The law gives a roundabout remedy, in holding the owner of such dogs responsible for such damages, to be recovered by warrant before a magistrate. But in nine cases out of ten this is no relief, for in that proportion, the mischief is done by unknown dogs, and there is no redress. The only remedy is to tax dogs out of existence. This has been tried again, and again without success, because there is an unaccountable fatality on the subject of dogs which sets all reasoning and calculation at defiance. Every man's dog has some valuable quality or trait imperceptible to the rest of mankind but which unites the owner to him by hooks of steel. It is in vain to tell that man, that his dog is a nuisance, that he sucks eggs, that he robs the kitchen, that he kills sheep, that he goes off at night, and is worthless as a watch-dog. It is vain to tell him, by the keeping of such dogs, he is ruining a most important branch of business, that he is reducing the number of sheep in the State, destroying the production of wool, cutting off the supply of a most healthful and nutritious food; that for the food required to keep a dog, a hog might be fattened in its place; that for every two dogs, a human being could be sustained; that in fine, his dogs are a tax and a curse to the country.

There is a charm about Dogs that is irresistible, and he can't give him up if the county should go to ruin. We remember some years ago meeting a very harmless, but a very shiftless creature hard pushed for the means of living in search of a lost dog. He had been engaged two days in the search when we saw him, and was eagerly accosting every one he met. We asked him about his dog, and his qualities. "Was he a good yard dog?" No, he wanted so good for that. "Was he a good fox dog?" No, he wouldn't take a terrier fox. "Was he a good coon or possum dog?" No, he wouldn't hunt sich. "Well, you say you have been looking after him for two days; what in the world is he good for?" With a very foolish grin, he replied, "Well, he's mighty good for rabbits."

And so with nineteen hundred and ninety nine thousand out of the two million dogs in the State. They are a curse, a canker, a nuisance to the country, and should be gotten rid of. They should be taxed, so that the keeping of an unnecessary number will become a costly luxury. Let each proprietor of a farm or a house hold be allowed a reasonable number, free from tax, and put it to the rest without mercy, and let the tax be vigorously exacted.

We are fond of dogs, and would protect them in moderate quantity, but are not willing to see the country overrun or eaten up by them.

The Granite Factory.

This mill situated immediately on the line of the North Carolina Rail Road where it crosses Haw River, in the extent and variety of its operations is surpassed by no other establishment of the kind, in the State, if indeed it is equalled by any. The ambition of the proprietors has urged them to steps that had not previously been ventured upon in this State, while intelligent application of skill and capital has crowned with success innovations that in hands less bold might have ended in disaster. No factory that we know of in the State with the exception of the one on Cane Creek in Alamance, had undertaken successfully the manufacture of colored fabrics, and the Granite Factory is probably alone in the production of other articles of which we will speak in the proper connection.

Its beauty and durability of colors, and in thorough fidelity of workmanship, the articles known as Striped and Checked domestics, and plaids, not only rival the same class of goods made at the North, but in reality far surpass them. No one can see the products of the two sections side by side without unhesitatingly giving a decision in favor of the work of the Granite Factory, and so high is this appreciation carried, that the goods of the latter push aside the former even in its own markets.

But we are likely to extend our article too far, and will therefore proceed to a statement of the capacity and productions of the mill, omitting for the present, any mention of the buildings.

There are in the mill 66 looms, 28 spinning frames, containing 4704 spindles, 18 Reels, 4 Warp mills, 6 Spoolers, 3 Improved Bobbin winders or Quillers, 1 Woods Improved Lapper, with 3 Beaters, 1 do. with 2 Beaters, 30 thirty six inch self-stripping cards, 6 Railway Heads, 6 Drawing Frames, 6 Speeders, 2 Improved Card grinders, 1 English Opener, 1 Banding machine, and 1 Screw cutting Lathe for repairs.

The productions of the Factory are Bundle Yarn, Warps for the Philadelphia market, Striped and Checked Domestics, Counterpane Plaids, Bed Ticks, Cottons, Drills, Sheetings, Shirtings, and Osnaburges. About 2600 yards of goods of all the above kinds are turned out per day, and 2300 lbs of yarn and warps, requiring a consumption of about 9 bales of cotton per day.

About 180 hands are employed, all white, and mostly girls. Some of the girls (weavers) make from 12 to $15 per month beyond their board.

The machinery is all new and of the most improved kind, and additions are constantly made to bring the establishment up to the high standard aimed at by the proprietors. The water-power is valued at high, and under easy control, and may be applied to much larger use than it is taxed with at present.

The mills are backed by a very pretty village grown up for the occupancy of the operatives, each house nicely painted, and having a garden attached; schools and places of worship are provided, and the mental and moral wants of the people supplied.

The Cotton mills do not exhaust the power or the interest of the locality, but we can now only refer to the large flouring mills, (one of which is almost the largest in the State) but from its situation, "Haw River," as the station is known must in time become one of the most important manufacturing points in the South.

We have other interesting details of operations at this point, which want of space compels us to postpone until next issue.

Small Pox in Person.

Below we publish a statement from a student by a distinguished gentleman, Person County, which might be of some interest to our readers. It is a statement in regard to the existence of small pox in the vicinity of Hillsboro. It is stated that the report was well grounded, and it is concluded that the nature of the disease is misunderstood.

Persons which inserted our article announcing the existence of the disease, we counter a favor upon us and a deed of justice to the people of Person Co. by also publishing the following:

MONROE, N. C. June 13, 1873.
Mr. Editor: I see that the report of small pox in Person County, first published in your paper has been generally circulated. I write to ask you to correct it. It is all a mistake. At first I was thought to be true, and precautions were used to prevent the spread of the disease. But it is now ascertained that there has been nothing of the sort. The sick persons are now all well and going about in Person and elsewhere, as usual, and the disease has spread no farther.

The physician first called in [who pronounced] small pox has admitted his mistake and the doctors are now agreed that it was only an aggravated form of chicken pox.

Oblige by requesting the papers which have helped spread the report to correct it. You may vouch for the reliability of this denial, as you know me personally.

Yours truly,
PERSON.

Death of a Fine Horse.

The fine horse, Charles Morgan purchased last fall from J. S. Babby by Dr. J. F. Cain died suddenly a few days ago. He was a thorough bred animal of the Morgan breed and was a valuable addition to the stock of this country. His death is a great loss not only to the owner but to the public.

STATE NEWS.

The report of the County Treasurer of Wake shows that Sheriff Lee owes the County a balance of $28,416.17. A fire in Raleigh a few nights ago in the grocery of Mr. Benn, destroyed the building. Mr. B. was seriously hurt by the explosion of a barrel of kerosene. Capt. Brain is getting up a company for the manufacture of ice in Raleigh, and $1100 has already been subscribed. Judge Pearson and Boyden are absent from the Supreme Court on account of sickness. A fire in Wilmington on the premises of Williams and Morrison was subdued with the loss of about one thousand dollars on the building, and considerable loss on the stock. We are glad to learn it was all covered by insurance. The assessed value of city property in Wilmington is Five Million dollars, a considerable increase over last year.

grounds over the bar below Wilmington caught one thousand black fish. The Milton Chronicle says a little son of Mr. John W. Burton of Caswell was thrown from a buggy and trampled on by the horse, by which several ribs were broken. Milton boast of beating Richmond in the tobacco market, getting $29 for the same quality for which Richmond paid $20. The farmers of Caswell propose to build prize houses, and ship their tobacco direct to Richmond. How are these two items reconciled? Both taken from the Chronicle. Building is active in Raleigh, and some extensive and handsome buildings have been commenced on Fayetteville street. Attempts at intimidation were made on the workmen employed by Mr. O'Neal by the strikes. The Depot is to be soon removed to Wake Forest College, an excellent move. A Mr. Hennessy, a wealthy manufacturer from the vicinity of Boston, is prospecting Raleigh with a view of transferring his operations to that point. Glad to hear it. Mr. T. C. Mills has found six valuable diamonds on his gold mine workings in Burke, all thought to be of the first water. So says the Piedmont Press. The Wilmington Star says a little negro, only 3 years old was killed by drinking a quantity of whiskey which it was made to drink by an older child. Anderson "the baggage man," well known to visitors in Wilmington is dead. He was a very worthy colored man, and was aged about 60 years. Wilmington has been hambugged and swindled by a Northern Methodist preacher, named Warren. He had been preaching for sometime in the Methodist Church, but was exposed by Ministers at the North as a villain. He withdrew from that Church, which we suppose the cause of the troubles that denomination sometime ago. He was lately arrested in attempting to letters out of the post office, containing money, addressed to other parties. Released on bail, he fled, and has gone back North.

TO THE CITIZENS OF HILLSBORO.

Having been duly elected by the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Hillsboro, to succeed J. B. McDade, whose resignation as Magistrate of Person has been accepted by the Board, and being become bound by the oath of office, to execute the laws of the town, I hereby request the citizens generally to help themselves of their duties.

These duties are imperative upon the part of the citizens, and mutual co-operation is needed to give full effect to the ordinances at different times adopted for the preservation of health and good order in the town.

If there are nuisances about your places have them removed before it is too late.

Notice.

White Cross in Blenheim Township has been changed by the Board of Commissioners, to Euclid-Stone in said Township. All parties interested will take due notice thereof. By order of the Board of Commissioners of Orange County this 9th day of June 1873.

JOHN LAWS, Clerk.
